Alexander Graham Bell was born in 1847, but when he was a young man of twenty three he moved with his parents to Canada. Before the year was over, young Graham had left his family and gone to Boston. Though Bell was a dreamer, he was also a practical thinker and a man of action. In Boston, where he worked by day as a teacher of the deaf, he worked far into the night experimenting with the electrical transmission of sound. "You can't make owl sleep at night," he once wrote in a letter. "The more I explore this wonderful subject of electricity, the more boundless seems the prospect before me."

His reward came on March 10, 1876. That evening when he was conducting an experiment, he accidentally spilled some acid on his clothes. He called to his assistant in another room, "Mr. Watson, come here, I want you." Watson, who was holding the receiving telephone to his ear, heard the words and rushed to tell the inventor, "Mr. Bell, I heard every word you said - distinctly." The first complete sentence had been transmitted by telephone.

Once a poor farmer had a daughter names Little Pea. After his wife died, the farmer married again. His new wife had a daughter, Stout Nut. Unfortunately, the new wife was very cruel to Little Pea. Little Pea had to do chores all day. This made Little Pea's father very upset. He soon died of a broken heart.

Summer came and went. In the fall, the village held its harvest festival. That year, everyone was excited as the prince wanted to choose his wife from the village. Stout Nut's mother made new clothes for her, but poor Little Pea had none.

However, before the festival started, a fairy appeared and magically changed Little Pea's rags into beautiful clothes.

As Little Pea ran to the festival, she dropped one of her shoes and lost it. When the prince found the shoe, he decided to marry the girl who owned it. Of course the shoe fitted Little Pea, and the prince immediately fell in love with her.

Every year students in many countries learn English. Some of these students are young children. Others are teenagers. Many are adults. Some learn at school, others study by themselves. A few learn English just by hearing the language, in film, on television, in the office, or among their friends. But not many are lucky enough to do that. Most people must work hard to learn another language.

Learning another language! Learning English! Why do all these people want to learn English? It is difficult to answer that question. Many boys and girls learn English at school because it is one of their subjects. They study their own language, and mathematics ... and English. (In England, or American, or Australia, many boys and girls study their own language, which is English, and mathematics, ... and another language, perhaps French, or German, or Spanish.)

Many adults learn English, because it is useful for their work. Teenagers often learn English for their higher studies, because some of their books are in English at the college or university. Other people learn English because they want to read newspaper or magazine in English

This museum is in the centre of the town, a few metres from the cathedral, and near the market. It contains dolls, dolls' houses, books, games and pastimes, mechanical and constructional toys. In this collection there are toys made by all sorts of toy manufacturers from the most important to the smallest, including the most ordinary toys and the most precious. There are also records of children's pastimes over the last hundred and fifty years.

Most major manufacturing countries of Europe had toy industries in the last century; French and German factories produced million of toys each year. Many collectors of toys think that the second half of the nineteenth century was the best period for toy production and the museum has many examples of toys from this period which are still in perfect condition.. There is now a growing interest in the toys of the 1920s and 1930s and as a result of this the museum has begun to build up a collection from these years. Visitors to the museum will find that someone is always available to answer questions – we hope you will visit us.

In the United Kingdom we each use about two hundred steel food cans every year. steel cans are popular because they are convenient, easy to store and unbreakable. But when you have finished with a can what do you do with it? Do you throw it away and forget all about it?

Probably! But behind the scenes there are people whose job it is to make sure that the steel is never wasted. In fact, recycling and reusing steel cans is so successful that every day of the year more than five million cans start new lives in new steel products.

After you have thrown your cans., what happens? Well, first of all it is collected by the men who empty your dustbin each week and taken to a tip, together with all the other household rubbish. Then the rubbish is sorted and the steel cans are taken separately to the factory which turns dirty old can into high quality steel. It is this steel which may well find its way back into your home in the form of knives and fork, garden equipment and, of course, food and drink cans.

So next time you open your fizzy drink just remember where your can may have been!

II. Hãy đọc đoạn văn sau rồi trả lời những câu hỏi bên dưới

To the people of ancient Egypt, life on earth was short. Life after death, however, was eternal. Therefore they built their tombs of stone and took their possessions with them into another world. The more important person, the greater the tomb. The Pharaoh's tombs were the largest. The Pharaohs were the rulers of the country and when they died they became Gods. Many of their tombs remain, some of them have become one of the wonders of the world. These are the pyramids.

The purpose of these huge stone mountains is to protect the burial chamber from the weather and from the thieves who might try to steal the gold, jewels and precious possessions placed there to accompany the dead ruler into eternal life. Their shapes, with four triangular sides spreading from a single point, represented the rays of the sun connecting Ra, the god of the sun, with the dead ruler.

Their position on the west bank of the River Nile was where the sun set every day and where they believed it began its journey into the west bank of the river. At Giza, across the river from Cairo, the ancient Egyptians built the greatest tomb of all: the Great Pyramid of King Cheops. But how the ancient Egyptians moved and lifted those huge blocks of stone remains a mystery. Some believe that they must have used ramps. Others think that they might have used hundreds of weight arms.

Many people buy and use copied programs for their computer. This illegal copying of computer software has become a huge industry because the software is much cheaper than the original programs.

Illegal software can be found on sale in any part of the world, although it is more readily available in Asia than in Western countries. Software manufacturers have been trying to get governments to stop this copying or "pirating". In an attempt to get rid of "software pirates", police have seized software from stores and fined the owners. This has been partially successful, but manufacturers are still losing a lot of money.

By using this kind of software, computer owners risk damaging their computer. Illegally copied software can carry computer viruses which could wipe out information stored on the computer's hard drives.

Paper was (1) by the Chinese in the first century AD. The art of paper-making took 700 years to (2) the Muslim world another 700 years to get to Britain (via Spain, southern France and Germany).

Most paper is made from wood. When trees are cut down, they are (3) by land or water to paper mills. Here they are cut (4) and the wood is broken up into fibres, which are (5) with water and chemicals. This wood pulp is then dried on a machine and made into paper.

Paper-making is an important British (6) and paper from Britain is exported to South Africa, Australia and many other countries. Some of wood used in British paper-making industry (7) from other countries such as Norway. One tree is needed for every 400 (8) of a typical forty-page newspaper. If half the adults in Britain each buy one daily paper, this uses up over 40,000 trees a day. Trees are being cut down faster than they are being (9), so there may be a(n) (10) paper shortage before the year 2000.
